Colonial Records. Calendar of State Papers, Colonial

Excerpt from Calendar of State Papers, Vol. 43: Colonial Series America and West Indies Preserved in the Public Record Office On the other hand, the historical relationship of Georgia to other colonies and to the wider themes of colonial history argues cogently for the inclusion of these records. This is especially so in the years before the outbreak of war in 1739. Apart from Gibraltar, Georgia was the only land-frontier between British and Spanish possessions; Spain did not recognize the existence of the new colony on land over which she claimed sovereignty. As early as 1737 there were widespread apprehensions of an attack upon Georgia from Florida. (see, for example, index to the present volume under Georgia, Foreign Relations; South Carolina; Spain and the Spaniards) It is an obvious convenience to the historian that these expressions of anxiety in and about Georgia should be calendared and indexed in a volume which also contains material illustrating the fear of Spanish aggressions in Jamaica, the Bahamas and the British West Indian colonies generally. The decision to include the Georgia records adds greatly to the number of papers in this volume. Of the 662 principal abstracts, 277 derive from the correspondence, minutes and memorials of the Georgia Society. Inevitably some of these papers have a less general historical significance than those of long-established crown colonies. But the domestic minutiae of Georgia may be expected to diminish in later volumes. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books. Calendar of State Papers

Excerpt from Calendar of State Papers Colonial Series, America and West Indies, Vol. 45: Preserved in the Public Record Office; 1739 North Carolina, Rhode Island and Maryland presented replies through their agents in London, that is to say, without a letter of explanation from the governor. The last responses to reach Whitehall, those of Virginia and Jamaica, arrived at the Plantations Office on 22 July 1740. A little over a year, therefore, went by in circulating the inquiry and obtaining answers. It seems a long time but it would be interesting to know if any other eighteenth - century empire, Spanish, Portuguese, French or Dutch, launched and completed an investigation of like complexity in less than twelve months. As in the Calendar volumes for 1737 and 1738 Georgia makes a large and important contribution to the contents of vo]. XLV, much of it consisting of records of a private nature at the time of their creation though now and since 1752 when Georgia became a crown colony part of the public archives. It was this slight ambiguity of status that led to the exclusion of those records from Vols XXXVII - XLII, a decision reversed in Vol. XLIII for 1737. By 1739 most of Georgia's records were still of a recognizably private kind: the Trustees' correspondence with their officers and settlers in Georgia, their domestic letters, and their minutes. The Trustees reported annually to Parliament but direct correspondence between Georgia and the departments concerned with colonial administration was still rare. As yet there were no Customs officers in the colony, though their absence was beginning to be noticed and exploited (nos 280, No assembly had been constituted in Georgia, so no laws were enacted there for scrutiny by the Commissioners for Trade and Plantations. Legislative authority remained with the Trustees in London who seldom used it. In 1739 they passed only one law, for appointing pilots and raising a duty on shipping to pay for that service (no This Act brought them into touch with the Commissioners, with disappointing results. The law obtained the approval of the board's legal adviser, Francis Fane, but was opposed by South Carolina's agent and still awaited confirmation at the end of the year (nos 336, The Commissioners at this time kept no Georgia files, placing such papers as they preserved among South Carolina's records (nos 336. Excerpt from Calendar of State Papers Colonial Series, America and West Indies, Vol. 42: 1735-1736, Preserved in the Public Record Office Records Of both the Secretary and the Board deprives such imperfections of anything but an academic interest for users of this and other volumes. The existence Of the Board Of Trade, indeed, Often leads to an excessive duplication of information. Some over-zealous colonial Governors wrote Dispatches for the Secretary and the Board which, though not copies, contain substantially the same material. For example, the long Dispatches which President Clarke, Acting Governor of New York, wrote to the Secretary of State Often covered much the same ground as those which he wrote to the Board Of Trade. Whatever defects the Board of Trade may have diagnosed in its own Records appear at this date to have been redeemed by the Secretary, and vice versa. An examination Of C. M. Andrews' and F. G. Davenport's Guide to the Manuscript Materials for the History of the United States to 1783 in the British Museum, in Minor London Archives, and in the Libraries of Oxford and Cambridge (carnegie Institution Publications N O. 90, Washington, 1908) for the period covered by this volume suggests that very few Official Papers have strayed from their proper Custodians. Copies of Official Records abound in the Newcastle Papers preserved in the British Museum, but original Documents relevant to the colonial history Of this date are seemingly few. Calendar of State Papers

Excerpt from Calendar of State Papers, 1738, Vol. 44: Colonial Series; America and West Indies; Preserved in the Public Record Office This volume contains 570 principal abstracts and a further 226 documents which are enclosures to correspondence. More than one-third 211 of the principal abstracts are from the archives of the Trustees for Georgia, though only 15 of the enclosures come from that source. The explanation is as follows: Georgia at this time had no governor but instead a number of officers whose relationship to one other was not always perfectly clear xst, and and 3rd bailiffs at Savannah, recorder, surveyor, sec retary for the Trust's affairs in Georgia, etc. In royal provinces most official matters were communicated to the Secretary of State and the Lords Commissioners of Trade and Plantations, either by the governor in his own words, or through him in the form of enclosures to his letters. In the case of Georgia, however, all the principal officials in the colony corresponded directly with the Trustees in London. Papers from Georgia which, if from another province, would have been sent to Britain as enclosures (or not at all) therefore appear in this Calendar as principal abstracts. Another peculiarity of the infant-colony of Georgia was that many matters, which in an established province were largely or wholly private business, remained under the surveillance of the Trustees such were the cultivation of land, importation of servants, education, religion, food supply etc. This is why the Georgia records occupy a predominant position in the Calendar at this date. In due course the predominance will disappear. Adding together principal abstracts and enclosures there are 796 documents in the present volume (which covers the year 17 compared to 1009 in Vol. XLIII for 17 57, a reduction of the order of one-fifth. For this reduction, there is no obvious explanation. In view of growing fears of a war with Spain in the West Indies and America, more rather than fewer documents might have been expected to originate in the colonies, particularly in danger-spots such as Georgia, Jamaica and the Leewards. Yet the number of principal abstracts from the Georgia archives falls from 277 in 17 37 to 211 in 17 38, while Governor Mathew's letters from the Leeward Islands decline from 19 to 17. Letters from the governor of Jamaica, it is true, rise from 12 to 23 but this more re ects the arrival of Governor Edward Trelawny in the island than any increase in business regarding Spain. Colonial Records. Calendar of State Papers, Colonial Excerpt from Calendar of State Papers, Colonial Series, America and West Indies, Jan; 1716 July, 1717: Preserved in the Public Record Office The famous Whig writer had already served for over a year as a Commissioner for Trade and Plantations, long enough, that is, to make him well acquainted with the problems of the Colonies, and also with the working of the office of the Council of Trade It will be seen that, as the result of that experience, he lent a ready ear, as Secretary of State, to suggestions from that Board. One of his first steps was to direct the Board to remind Governors once more of their Instructions to transmit regular accounts of the Revenue in the Plantations (646, Addison had been Chief Secretary of Ireland in 1708, and Secretary to the Lords Justices on the accession of George I. There is a traditional story that when he was promoted to the latter office, this accomplished and versatile essayist and pamphleteer found himself quite incapable of composing a letter to the King without the assistance of a clerk. The routine of each office has, of course, as Macaulay observed some little mysteries which the dullest man may learn with a little attention, and which the greatest man cannot possibly know by On such points Addison might well require some prompting. But with his experience of previous offices, and the knowledge drawn from over a year's work at the Board of Trade, a man of Addison's literary ability cannot now at any rate have needed any clerk at his elbow to help him in drawing up a State Paper. Certainly the documents here printed, many of them written in his own hand, exhibit just that lucidity and simplicity and that easy adoption of appropriate official directness, without any attempt at literary ornament, which one would naturally expect from such a master of style. The wit and humour of the Spectator would be as out of place in the dispatches of a Secretary of State as the eloquence of Cato. Instead we find simple and straightforward statements of policy and facts with no trace of fastidiousness. Life and Writings of Addison. Of. Spence, Anecdotes, p. 175. Calendar of State Papers, Vol. 43

Excerpt from Calendar of State Papers, Colonial Series: America and West Indies, 1726-1727 The years 1726, 1727, whose papers are calendared in this volume, were comparatively uneventful in the British colonies, and most Of the important subjects that are dealt with had appeared first in earlier years, so that we have here only the sequel Of previous events. The time was one Of steady material progress, and there is no doubt that in most of the colonies there was an increase Of well-being which absorbed a greater part of the energies Of the colonists than before and made them less ready to engage in the factious disputes which fill so large a place in many Of the earlier volumes of the Calendar. Calendar of State Papers, Colonial Series, America and West Indies ...

CONTENTS. PAGE INTRODUCTION, The papers here dealt with cover the years 1724 and 1725 and were abstracted by the late Mr. Cecil Headlam, the editor of the Colonial Calendar upon which had been engaged as editor from 1905 to 1974. Unfortunately he was afflicted by comparatively early death before he was able to write the Preface to the volume, and that task has fallen to a new hand. The publication of the Calendar of State Papers, Colonial Series, America and West Indies began two generations ago, and though it has been pursued uninterruptedly for three-quarters of a century, it has discharged the labours of almost three editors in succession during that long period. The first volume was prepared by W. Noel Sainsbury, and published under the direction of the Master of the Rolls Sir John Romilly in 1860. It covered the period from 1754 down to the Restoration of 1783, wherein the colonial papers in the public archives were comparatively scanty. Since then, however, have each dealt with a much shorter period. Between 1860 and 1893 four volumes appeared in the American and West Indies Series under Sainsbury's editorship, the second, third and fourth covering the period down to 1860 together with a collection of documents for the early period. On Sainsbury's death in 1895 the work was taken up by the late Sir John Portman, and he brought out seven volumes of the Calendar including the papers of the years 1677 to 1698. When he resigned in 1905, Mr. Cecil Headlam became editor. In the seventeenth volume published between 1908 and 1934 he covered the period from 1603 to 1723, each of the later volumes including the papers belonging to two successive years. Before his last illness he had abstracted the papers of some of the years, but had not prepared the Preface to the volume in which they were to be published. The preface of the papers here dealt with has been supplied in the Prefaces to early volumes of the Calendar. of the State Papers. of, State Paper, but it is convenient to recapitulate some of that statement in order to recall certain points with regard to the sources of the materials included. After the appointment of Sir Thomas Dilke as Keeper of the State Papers in 1861, it was ordered that the papers of the Secretaries of State should be deposited, when they came to the end of their custody, in the State Paper Office. In fact, however, this regulation was very imperfectly obeyed, and many Secretaries of State carried away their papers when they left office. The collection of papers now reserved under the custody of the Master of the Rolls is therefore incomplete, and there are many gaps...

Mahomet and His Successors

In this groundbreaking work, Washington Irving offers a detailed and sympathetic portrait of the life and times of Mahomet, as well as the early years of Islam. Drawing on historical and literary sources, Irving paints a vivid picture of the religious and political turmoil of the Arabian Peninsula during that time. This book is essential reading for anyone interested in the history of religion and the Middle East. This

Mahomet and His Successors

PREFACE. THE Author of this very practical treatise on Scotch Loch - Fishing desires clearly that it may be of use to all who had it. He does not pretend to have written anything new, but to have attempted to put what he has to say in as readable a form as possible. Everything in the way of the history and habits of fish has been studiously avoided, and technicalities have been used as sparingly as possible. The writing of this book has afforded him pleasure in his leisure moments, and that pleasure would be much increased if he knew that the perusal of it would create any bond of sympathy between himself and the angling community in general. This section is interleaved with blank sheets for the readers notes. The Author need hardly say that any suggestions addressed to the case of the publishers, will meet with consideration in a future edition. We do not pretend to write or enlarge upon a new subject. Much has been said and written-and well said and written too on the art of fishing but loch-fishing has been rather looked upon as a second-rate performance, and to dispel this idea is one of the objects for which this present treatise has been written. Far be it from us to say anything against fishing, lawfully practised in any form but many pent up in our large towns will bear us out when we say that, on the whole, a days loch-fishing is the most convenient. One great matter is, that the loch-fisher is dependent on nothing but enough wind to curl the water, -and on a large loch it is very seldom that a dead calm prevails all day, -and can make his arrangements for a day, weeks beforehand whereas the stream-fisher is dependent for a good take on the state of the water and however pleasant and easy it may be for one living near the banks of a good trout stream or river, it is quite another matter to arrange for a days river-fishing, if one is looking forward to a holiday at a date some weeks ahead. Providence may favour the expectant angler with a good day, and the water in order but experience has taught most of us that the good days are in the minority, and that, as is the case with our rapid running streams, -such as many of our northern streams are, -the water is either too large or too small, unless, as previously remarked, you live near at hand, and can catch it at its best. A common belief in regard to loch-fishing is, that the tyro and the experienced angler have nearly the same chance in fishing, -the one from the stern and the other from the bow of the same boat. Of all the absurd beliefs as to loch-fishing, this is one of the most absurd. Try it. Give the tyro either end of the boat he likes give him a cast of ally flies he may fancy, or even a cast similar to those which a crack may be using and if he catches one for every three the other has, he may consider himself very lucky. Of course there are lochs where the fish are not abundant, and a beginner may come across as many as an older fisher but we speak of lochs where there are fish to be caught, and where each has a fair chance. Again, it is said that the boatman has as much to do with catching trout in a loch as the angler. Well, we dont deny that. In an untried loch it is necessary to have the guidance of a good boatman but the same argument holds good as to stream-fishing...

This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text. Purchasers can usually download a free scanned copy of the original book (without typos) from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1868 edition. Excerpt: ... APPENDIX. OF THE ISLAM FAITH. fN an early chapter of this work we have given such particulars of the faith inculcated by Mahomet as we deemed important to the understanding of the succeeding narrative: we now, though at the expense of some repetition, subjoin a more complete summary, accompanied by a few observations. The religion of Islam, as we observed on the before-mentioned occasion, is divided into two parts; Faith and Practice: -- and first of Faith. This is distributed under six different heads, or articles, viz: 1st, faith in God; 2d, in his angels; 3d, in his Scriptures or Koran; 4th, in his prophets; 5th, in the resurrection and final judgment; 6th, in predestination. Of these we will briefly treat in the order we have enumerated them. Faith In God. -- Mahomet inculcated the belief that there is, was, and ever will be, one only God, the creator of all things; who is single, immutable, omniscient, omnipotent, all-merciful, and eternal. The unity of God was specifically and strongly urged, in contradistinction to the Trinity of the Christians. It was designated, in the profession of faith, by raising one finger, and exclaiming, "La illaha il Allah!" There is no God but God; to which was added, "Mohamed Resoul Allah!" Mahomet is the prophet of God. Faith In Angels.--The beautiful doctrine of angels, or ministering spirits, which was one of the most ancient and universal of oriental creeds, is interwoven throughout the Islam system. They are represented as ethereal beings, created from Air, the purest of elements, perfect in form and radiant in beauty, but without sex; free from all gross or sensual passion, and all the appetites and infirmities of frail humanity; and existing in perpetual and unfading youth. They are various...

Lives of Mahomet and His Successors

Excerpt from Mahomet and His Successors, Vol. 1 of 2 Some apology may seem necessary for presenting a life of Mahomet at the present day, when no new fact can be added to those already known concerning him. Many years since, during a residence in Madrid, the author projected a series of writings illustrative of the domination of the Arabs in Spain. These were to be introduced by a sketch of the life of the founder of the Islam faith, and the first mover of Arabian conquest. Most of the particulars for this were drawn from Spanish sources, and from Gagnier's translation of the Arabian historian Abulfeda, a copy of which the author found in the Jesuits' Library of the Convent of St. Isidro, at Madrid. Not having followed out in its extent the literary plan devised, the manuscript lay neglected among the author's papers until the year 1831, when he revised and enlarged it for the Family Library of Mr. John Murray. Circumstances prevented its publication at the time, and it again was thrown aside for years. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books. Mahomet and His Successors, Vol. 1 of 2 (Classic Reprint)

According to Mohammed, the one true religion was revealed to five great prophets before him - Adam, Noah, Abraham, Moses and Jesus. But each time their message was ignored and people chose to worship false gods instead. As the last and greatest prophet of the one and only God, it was his task to abolish all idolatry. For many years his mission seemed hopeless. As long as he remained in Mecca, he made few converts and had to endure dangers and persecution. But when the city of Medina offered him sanctuary, his small band of followers rapidly multiplied. Mohammed now led his armies out to do battle in the desert, spreading his religion at the point of the sword

Works of Washington Irving

Dictionary of Anthropology

The Dictionary of Anthropology is a comprehensive explication of basic terms and concepts of archaeology, cultural anthropology, linguistics, and physical anthropology. The terms have been selected from standard source and instructional materials, and include identifications of some major early contributors to anthropology. This is the only collection in any language of the specialized vocabularies of all the fields of anthropology. It is a handbook not only for anthropologists but for everyone interested in the study of man and of man's cultural and physical heritage.
