#British Cafe Racers #Cafe Racer Motorcycles #Classic Motorcycles #UK Motorcycle Culture #Motorcycle Modification

British Cafe Racers represent a significant subculture in the history of motorcycling, originating in post-war Britain. These bikes are characterized by their stripped-down, minimalist design, prioritizing speed and handling over comfort. Cafe racers were originally built for quick dashes between cafes, embodying a rebellious spirit and a passion for motorcycle performance. The British motorcycle industry played a key role in popularizing the style, and many enthusiasts continue to build and restore these iconic machines today.

cutting some scrap square tubing sanding the spots where I will weld shaping a piece of angle bar this is a spare piston pin measuring the inside width of the square tubing paint marker makes more visible mark lines transfer the width measurement to the piston pin cutting the piston pin to length insert this inside the end of square tubing assemble the pieces for welding the horizontal piece on top is temporary to keep the assembly square during welding i tack all the pieces then do the final welds then do the final welding i drilled holes at the ends drill holes at the angle bar pieces and tap threads on this hole. can weld a nut if you don't have a tap the angle bar pieces attach by a bolt that passes through the piston pin the piston pin makes the ends rigid now it's time to drill another set of holes rest the engine case and mark the holes drill the holes as marked can work with just a simple bolt painted all the pieces I attached these anti slip pads used in furnitures makes the engine stand more stable and the details of the smaller bolts this is how the engine stand is assembled the engine case is attached through the smaller bolts clamps it in position washers and spacers are used as necessary those metal pieces i welded at the bolt head makes tightening easier and the engine can be rotated at full 360 deg the long bolts are extended to accept the other side of the engine case the top end can be attached as well spacers and washers are used as the engine mounting points are different width there you go, a very simple yet effective engine stand
