The Foreign Quarterly Review, Volume 33

Excerpt from National Quarterly Review, Vol. 33 Nothing could be farther from our present purpose than to attempt an examination of these different claims. Yet, as bearing somewhat upon our subject, it has been thought not altogether irrelevant to give a brief outline of the more important theories adopted. One historian, * for example, is fully persuaded that the original settlers here were Carthaginians and Jews. The Carthaginians being a commercial people sent their emissaries over the world, among other places to the western hemisphere. This system of emigration proving hurtful to the State, the Carthaginian Senate put a sudden stop to it, and so those who had been left upon this continent were cut off from communication with the mother country, and turned barbarians. As to the native Brazilians, the learned Portuguese declared that the institution of circumcision alone was needed to render their similarity to the Israelites perfect. Unlike some other reproductions of classic texts (1) We have not used OCR(Optical Character Recognition), as this leads to bad quality books with introduced typos. (2) In books where there are images such as portraits, maps, sketches etc We have endeavoured to keep the quality of these images, so they represent accurately the original artefact. Although occasionally there may be certain imperfections with these old texts, we feel they deserve to be made available for future generations to enjoy.

METHODIST QUARTERLY REVIEW VOL

Scrutiny was first issued quarterly from Cambridge between 1932 and 1953, the principal editor throughout being Dr Leavis. It is now recognized as a formative influence on English intellectual and cultural life worthy to rank with the great reviews of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. This reissue is of the 1963 combined set, including a final volume containing an important Retrospect by Dr Leavis and a substantial analytical index. Scrutiny offers an almost complete critical history of English literature from Chaucer to the mid-twentieth century. Medieval literature, Shakespeare, the seventeenth-century poets, Pope, Dryden, Johnson, the great romantics, the Victorians, and nearly all the important modern writers are seriously examined. Many of the articles have become classics, and resulted in revisions of previously accepted views. An important feature of Scrutiny, still of great interest, is the book review section, where many of the important books of the time, and some of the pretentious ones too, were reviewed as they appeared.

The Quarterly Review, Volume 92

Excerpt from Methodist, Vol. 33 of 63: Quarterly Review, 1881 The life of Bishop Roberts was well written by his friend Dr. Elliott. That of Bishop Emory was published in connection with his works by his son Dr. Robert Emory. Ample justice was done to the life of Bishop Hedding by Dr. D. W. Clark, to whom, in turn, a similar service was rendered by Dr. Daniel Curry. Bishop Hamline has had two excellent biographers, while of eight other of our deceased Bishops no adequate memoirs have as yet been published. The Quarterly Review, Volume 51

Excerpt from The London Quarterly Review, Vol. 26: April and July, 1866 It was characteristic of the want of religious earnestness in the masses, and the want of genius and independence in the leaders, that under Edward VI. The Church of England had its Book of Common Prayer before it had a confession of faith; and, as the articles of religion came latest, their contents were more decidedly and consistently evangelical. Eliza beth's first care, again, was to proclaim her supremacy, and to establish uniformity in the celebration of divine service throughout the kingdom: it was not until after the lapse of thirteen years that the articles of religion were established by the authority of the Queen and Parliament and that the people were officially informed what they were to believe.
