At American University He Has 34 Years of Experience Working on the Middle East and the Africa Region and the Wider Muslim World and Lived for 15 Years in Seven Muslim Majority Countries As Well as in France since 2011 Bill Has Served Successfully There Successively but Also as the International Crisis Groups North Africa Project Director as the Middle East and North Africa Programs Director at the Center for the Study of Islam and Democracy and as Control Risks Middle East and North Africa Associates Director and I Also Want To Give a Shout-Out to Our Friend Ambassador Jake Wallace Who Certainly Can and Should Take Credit for Tunisia Success during this Political Transition

He's Now Studying Government and Social Studies at Wesleyan University in Connecticut Who Helped Finance His Trip Down To See Us Today Which Is Wonderful His Research Focuses on Politically Connected Businesses and Labor Politics in Tunisia the Format Today Will Be One of Q & a although They all Came with Remarks Prepared so We'll Try To Make that Work for You all and So the First Question to Mohammed Thea Is What's Going On Right Now with the Tunisian Political Transition and Following the Elections of September and October Why Don't We Have a Government Yet So I Guess I Have To Start since the the Results of the Elections

There Is a Significant Aspect of this Sort of Struggle over Issues of Identity When those Issues Are Reflected in in the Electoral Map It Becomes Even More Difficult To Have a Majoritarian System because those Who Are outside of It Fear Exclusion They They Fear that They'll Be Excluded and of Course the Fear Is on all Sides and Not the Fears that the More Secondly Oriented Parties Leftist Parties So Rather than Risk a Majoritarian Form of Government That Might Lead to Your Political Exclusion or Your or Losing Your Rights or Having Your Rights Diminished You Agree that Everybody's Going To Be Participate

Get Everybody Together You Have To Make Certain Kinds of Concessions That Have a Long-Term Impact on the Transition because Basically What You Agreed To Do Is To Disagree and Therefore the Consensus Based a System That Is Reflected the Constitution Itself in the Constitution Itself and the Wording of the Constitution Is a Was an Agreement To Disagree It's Postponed Conflicts down the Road and So whether We're Talking about the Absence of a Supreme Court of What To Do with the Security Apparatus and Chiefly What To Do about the Economic Situation All those Things Are Postponed because Nobody Wants To Make a Move so It's a It's a It's a Recipe for

It Will Lead Once Again to the Potential Collapse of the Transition that It Will Lead to So Much Polarization that Democracy as a Whole May Collapse but What's in Particular Enough Is Incentives Is that What They Fear Is that They Will Be Repressed Even Dissolved as a Party if those if that Level of Polarization Returns There Are Still Cases in the in the Court System in Tunisia Accusing an Octa of Having a Secret Apparatus That Was Responsible for Assassinations in in 2013 Is the Charge in those Court Cases or that They Had Facilitated the Flow of Foreign Fighters to Isis and So on those Basis

And So the Fear that Anetha Has Is that if We Go Back to a Turkish Style Government Where Essentially What the Current Prime Minister-Designate Was Proposing Elias Farc Was Proposing Essentially a Pro Revolution Government whereas the Anti Revolution Parties Would Be in the Opposition What Are Not the Fears Is that if You Have that Polarization Once Again that those Court Cases May Pass and Enough that Maybe May Be Dissolved that that Polarization Is Too Much To Handle at the Moment and so that I Think Is What Is Unique about another and Why They Are Pushing More So than any Other Party

There Have Been a Push for a Security Sector Reform in 2015 Which Is Would Have Been Unlikely since another and the Pro Revolution Parties Would Have Gone to the Opposition in this Counterfactual I Don't Think You Would Have Seen any Security Sector Reform either Already Pushed Back but What It Would Have Done Is To Keep that Issue Afloat with another in the Opposition Championing

the Need for Security Sector Reform and for Continued Transitional Justice and Therefore Allow that Opportunity Window of Opportunity To Re-Emerge in the Next Elections To Therefore Tackle those Issues I Think You Will Give Them the Phd

I Thought I Would Sort Of React by Offering a Couple Thoughts and Questions on some of the Possible Origins of this Current Situation and Possible Lessons from Tunisia as Recent Political History First Thought Last Question I Had Was about the Brief Period before any Elections Took Place but after Ben Ali Had Fled so February to November My Understanding of that Period Is that There Were Representatives of Different Political Parties and Other Organizations Also Operating on the Principle of Consensus but unlike Their Successor Governments Were Actually Able To Reach Mutually Acceptable Decisions So Just a First Point of Reflection Is Sort of What Changed Exactly When and Why in Tunisia as Transition

The Distinction between Consensus Politics and Majoritarian Politics

The Majority of Members of the Parliament Are against Freedom of Press
