I disappear from the fight and reappear over 60,000 m up in the air.

I get an episode of Jameson's podcast at about 58,000 m.

I pause the game and switch to the Iron Spider suit, because I've seen Infinity Wars and understand that I need it to breathe at that altitude.

Another episode of Jameson's podcast at around 21,000 m.

The mini-map (and Spider-man) appear for the first time at 16,000 m. I also pause and look at the map, which is nothing but a jumble of icons at this height.

I pass through the clouds and can see Manhattan and the surrounding area as I'm free falling for the first time. I also pause and check to see if I got the freefalling benchmark - which of course I did.

I'm starting to get close enough to the ground that you can see the effects of individual buildings as I'm falling.

I splashland in the water just a few feet from the coast of Jersey City. I spend the rest of the video exploring New Jersey. It's amazing how much work and detail went into a city that's not even in the game (although there is no collision detection, so I'm just swimming along below street level and jumping up to see the area).

I reach the big blue building in the distance (Goldman Sachs Tower maybe?) and get a close up look at it.
