Intro

PEOPLE A focus on producing and selling a product is an obvious way to get a business off the ground. But when it works, continued success requires more and more people to run the business.

SUCCESS A company's success requires skillful human resource management (HRM), the policies, practices, and systems that influence employees' behavior, attitudes, and performance.

MOTIVATION Decisions such as whom to hire, what to pay, what training to offer, and how to evaluate employee performance directly affect employees' motivation and ability to provide goods and services that customers value.

PERFORMANCE By influencing who works for the organization and how those people work, human resource management therefore contributes to basic measures of an organization's performance, such as quality, profitability, and customer satisfaction.

QUALITIES Organizations need the kind of resources that will give them sustainable competitive advantage. Human resources have these necessary qualities RARE Human resources are rare in the sense that a person with high levels of the needed skills and knowledge is not common. An organization may spend months looking for a talented and experienced manager or technician.

UNIQUE Human resources have no good substitutes. When people are well trained and highly motivated, they develop their abilities and care about customers. It is difficult to imagine another resource that can match committed and talented employees.

MANAGEMENT Effective management of human resources can form the foundation of a high-performance work system.

TECHNOLOGY This implies an organization in which technology, organizational structure, people, and processes work together seamlessly to give an organization an advantage in the competitive environment.

Maintaining a high-performance work system may include the development of training, recruitment, and rewards.

SUPERVISORS Although the human resource department has responsibility for many areas, some of the tasks may be performed by supervisors or others inside or outside the organization.

JOB ANALYSIS Job analysis is the process of getting detailed information about jobs. Job design is the process of defining the way work will be performed and the tasks that a given job requires.

HIRING Based on job analysis and design, an organization can determine the kinds of employees it needs and carries out the function of recruiting and hiring employees.

TRAINING Although organizations base hiring decisions on candidates' existing qualifications, most organizations provide training and development experiences for their employees to broaden or deepen their knowledge, skills, and abilities.

The process of ensuring that employees' activities and outputs match the organization's goals is called performance management. Various measures are used to compare the employee's performance with the desired results.

TOTAL REWARDS The pay and benefits that employees earn play an important role in motivating them. Decisions about pay and benefits can also support other aspects of an organization's strategy. Organizations often depend on human resource professionals to help them maintain positive relations with employees. This function includes establishing and communicating policies to promote fair decision making.

STRATEGY Today's HR professionals need to understand the organization's business operations, develop talent for present and future needs, craft effective HR strategies, and reinforce organizational culture.

HR can collect and use data to demonstrate their practices have a positive influence on the company's profits or key stakeholders.

COMPETENCIES The Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM) has defined sets of knowledge and skills associated with success, grouping these into nine categories it calls HR success competencies.

CLUSTERS These fall into four clusters of competencies: technical, interpersonal, business, and leadership. In other words, it is not enough to know how to perform tasks specific to human resource management.

HR ACTIVITIES In large organizations, HR departments advise and support the activities of the other departments. In small organizations, there may be an HR specialist, but many HR activities are carried out by line supervisors.

MANAGERS Either way, non-HR managers need to be familiar with the basics of HRM and their role in managing human resources.

PLANNING Organizations depend on supervisors to help them determine what kinds of work need to be done (job analysis and design) and how many employees are needed (HR planning).

HIRING Supervisors typically interview job candidates and participate in the decisions about which candidates to hire. Many organizations expect supervisors to train employees in some or all aspects of the employees' jobs.

POLICIES Supervisors conduct performance appraisals and may recommend pay increases. In all these activities, supervisors can participate in HRM by taking into consideration the ways that decisions and policies will affect their employees.

Understanding motivation and communication can help supervisors inspire the best from their teams.

ETHICS Ethics refers to fundamental principles of right and wrong; ethical behavior is behavior that is consistent with those principles.

PERCEPTIONS Business decisions, including HRM decisions, should be ethical, but recent surveys indicate that the general public and managers do not have positive perceptions of the ethical conduct of U.S. businesses.

RESPONSIBILITIES Many ethical issues in the workplace involve human resource management. For example, providing training about sexual harassment and establishing processes for handling complaints fall under the umbrella of HR responsibilities.

Ethical, successful companies act according to four principles. First, in their relationships with customers, vendors, and clients, ethical and successful companies emphasize mutual benefits. Second, employees assume responsibility for the actions of the company. Third, such companies have a sense of purpose or vision that employees value and use in their day-to-day work.

POSITIONS Some positions involve work in specialized areas of HRM such as recruiting, compensation, or employee benefits. Generalists usually perform the full range of HRM activities, including recruiting, training, compensation, and employee relations.

STUDY The vast majority of HRM professionals have a college degree, and many also have completed postgraduate work. The typical field of study is business, but some HRM professionals have degrees in the social sciences or law programs.

FIELD Those who have completed graduate work have master's degrees in HR management, business management, or a similar field. To be successful in HR, you need to speak the same language as people in the other business functions.

DEVELOPMENT HR professionals can increase their career opportunities by taking advantage of training and development programs. These may include passing an exam for a professional certification or learning more about the business.

CERTIFICATION Some HRM professionals have a professional certification in HRM, but many more are members of professional associations. The primary professional organization for HRM is the Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM).

SERVICES SHRM, the world's largest human resource management association, provides education and information services, conferences and seminars, government and media representation, and online services and publications.
