#China #Terrorism #Counter-terrorism #National security #Xinjiang

China's 'War on Terrorism' describes the Chinese government's extensive efforts to combat what it identifies as internal and external terrorist threats. This policy primarily targets separatist and extremist groups, especially in regions like Xinjiang, and encompasses a range of security measures, ideological education, and international cooperation aimed at safeguarding national stability and security, often sparking international debate over its human rights implications.
