Critical Commentary and Paraphrase on the Old and New Testament and the Apocrypha, Vol. 3 of 6 (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from Critical Commentary and Paraphrase on the Old and New Testament and the Apocrypha, Vol. 3 of 6 Ver. 7. And the Lord said unto Satan, Whence camest thou? Then Satan answered the Lord and said, From going to and fro in the earth, and from walking up and down in it.] And the Lord (to make him sensible he was not an absolute prince, but his subject) called to him, and demanded an account of him, where he had been, and from whence he came? To which he gave an answer, which expressed, as the great restlessness of his mind, and his unwearied diligence, so the limitation of his power, which extends only to this lower world; for he told him, he came from going to and fro in the earth, and from walking up and down in it. A Critical Commentary and Paraphrase on the Old and New Testament and the Apocrypha, Vol. 5 of 6 (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from A Critical Commentary and Paraphrase on the Old and New Testament and the Apocrypha, Vol. 5 of 6 I. In an exact and particular account of all the places mentioned in this Commentary, and especially in the Acts of the Apostles and this defect I have endeavoured to supply by a map of them drawn by a kind friend of great ability in those matters, and by an Alphabetical Table of them, with some brief remarks relating chiefly to the New Testament. And finding a Chronology of the New Testament done to my hand by a very exact and learned prelate of our church, from which my Commentary nowhere differs; I have added that also for the reader's use. II. Whereas it may be deemed a. Defect in this Commentary, that I have said nothing of the two great controversies concerning the genealogy of St. Luke; First, Whether Cainan did originally belong to it, or indeed ought to do so. A Critical Commentary and Paraphrase on the Old and New Testament and the Apocrypha: 4

Excerpt from A Commentary Upon the Old and New Testaments, With the Apocrypha, Vol. 5 of 7: From Genesis to Canticles; The Prophets; The Apocrypha; The New Testament But to all this we may answer in general, I. That it is a piece of natural justice due to an author, that is not living nor capable of explaining his own sentiments, to understand his expressions in the most favourable sense, and not to impute a bad meaning to him, as long as one is not forced to it by the plain evidence of his own words: Now we have shewn in the comment, that there are none of these passages which have been excepted against, but what may be understood in a good and consistent sense. 2. With respect to the additions which are complained of, it is common, we know, both in sacred and profane history, for one writer to supply what hath been omitted by another. A Critical Commentary and Paraphrase on the Old and New Testament and the Apocrypha; Volume 1

An expansive compilation of New Testament apocrypha in English translation, featuring fascinating but heretofore unpublished texts. New Testament Apocrypha, vol. 3, continues to unearth the vast diversity of Christian Scripture outside of the traditional canon. This new collection encompasses a broad range of languages—Greek, Church Slavic, Old English, Coptic, and more—and spans centuries, from the formation of the canonical New Testament to the high Middle Ages. The selections here represent some of the least studied apocryphal texts, many of which have not previously received an English translation or a critical edition. Notable newly edited and translated selections include The Martyrdom of Zechariah, The Decapitation of John the Forerunner, The Birth of John, The Revelation about the Lord's Prayer, and The Dialogue of Mary and Christ on the Departure of the Soul. Each text is accompanied by a robust introduction, bibliography, and notes. Scholars of apocrypha, Scripture, and hagiography from a breadth of disciplines will find this an indispensable reference for their research and teaching. Contributors: Carson Bay, Mark Glen Bilby, Rick Brannan, Christian H. Bull, Slavomir éplö, Alexander D'Alisera, J. Gregory Given, Nathan J. Hardy, Brandon W. Hawk, Stephen C. E. A Commentary Upon the Old and New Testaments, With the Apocrypha, Vol. 5 of 7

This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text. Purchasers can usually download a free scanned copy of the original book (without typos) from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1858 edition. Excerpt: ...and their political safety in constant and it was dense darkness, behold, a smoking furnace, and a flame of fire that passed between those pieces. 18. On that day the Lord made a covenant with Abram, saying, danger (comp. Judg. ii. 1-3). Violence or avarice had no share in the conquest; for, according to the Biblical notions, God Himself gives to every people their land (Dent. xxxii. 8; Acts xvii. 26); the Israelites had no human right to the possession of Canaan; it was the gift and favour of God; if He had deemed that occupation an injustice, He would have given to His chosen people another land, the appropriation of which would not have come into collision with the lawful interests of others. However objectionable the conduct of the Hebrews may have been, the theology of the Pentateuch is pure and stainless.--Thus, we avoid all unnecessary justifications of the alleged "invasion" of the Hebrews; for it is urged, that Canaan had, by Noah's distribution, fallen to the lot of the Shemites, not of the Hamites (Epiphanius); that it belonged, from times immemorial, to Abraham and his children, especially by the purchase of the cave of Machpelah, and of other property (Michaelis, Ewald, whereas, in fact, the Canaanites undoubtedly possessed it before the patriarch's time, xii. 6; xiii. 7, etc.); that the rights of property were, in those early times, not yet strictly defined, and that the Israelites were, therefore, entitled to conquer as much land as they required (! Faber, Hess; no doubt, with the inclusion of the carefully cultivated fields, and the well-built cities); we avoid these and all the other artificial attempts, which have been ably refuted by Hengstenberg (Authent. des Pcntat., ii. 471--507). After the sun had set, ...

CRITICAL COMMENTARY & PARAPHRASE

The Fortress Commentary on the Old Testament and Apocrypha presents a balanced synthesis of current scholarship, enabling readers to interpret Scripture for a complex and pluralistic world. The contributors bring a rich diversity of perspectives to the task of connecting solid historical critical analysis of the Scripture with sensitivity to theological, cultural, and interpretive issues. The volume includes introductory articles, section introductions, and individual book articles that explore key sense units through three lenses: • The Text in Its Ancient Context • The Text in the Interpretive Tradition • The Text in Contemporary Discussion

New Testament Apocrypha, vol. 3

Excerpt from Critical and Exegetical Commentary on the New Testament, Vol. 7 Some account of the circumstance has been undertaken, of the plan adopted in preparing it, and of the abbreviations used throughout, will be found prefixed to the Commentary on the Epistle to the Romans, which also contains a Preface specially written by Dr. Meyer for the English edition of his work. It is unnecessary here to repeat the explanations there given except in so far as they concern the course which I have followed in presenting to the English reader Dr. Meyer's work without subtraction or addition. In reproducing so great a masterpiece of exegesis, I have not thought it proper to omit any part of its discussions or of its references - however little some of these may appear likely to be of interest or use to English scholars - because an author such as Dr. Meyer is entitled to expect that his work shall not be tampered with, and I have not felt myself at liberty to assume that the judgment of others as to the expediency of any omission would coincide with my own. Nor have I deemed it necessary to append any notes of dissent from, or of warning against, the views of Dr. Meyer, even where these are decidedly at variance with opinions which I hold.
