Excerpt from Hunt's Merchants' Magazine and Commercial Review, Vol. 42: Established by Freeman Hunt in 1839; From January to June, Inclusive, 1860 In the commencement of this great and protracted struggle. Which took its rise in Greece, political ideas were very rude and undigested. Politics in Greece may indeed be said to have been in a state of chaos, even in the most enlightened period of their country. Having thrown off that patriarchal or kingly form of political organization, which pre vails in the earlier age of every nation, the States of Greece had not been able to organize government upon the principles of republicanism, at which they aimed, upon any except very rude and disorderly bases. Politics in Greece were in a transition state, which was necessarily, to a great extent, a state of disorder and confusion. How AI will transform the gaming industry - How AI will transform the gaming industry by Dr Waku 3,137 views 12 hours ago 19 minutes - Games are traditionally crafted by hand by a group of people with very different expertise. Most of the time goes into content ...

Intro

Contents

Part 1: Anatomy of a game

Open world vs scripted games

Generative AI can tailor whole universe

Example: dynamic AI engine in Left4Dead 2

Addictive potential of generative AI games

Games are technically challenging to create

Game engine description

Huge number of other skills needed

Not a lucrative industry unfortunately

Part 2: History of content generation

Most effort goes towards content, not game engine

Hand crafted content vs procedural generation

Random seeds for procedural content generation

Traditional assets take a lot of space

Example: .kkrieger game less than 100KB

Example: Elite Dangerous populates galaxy

Example: No Man's Sky generates flora, fauna, etc

Example: Minecraft needs only one seed

Example: nethack and crawl, highly inventive

Using algorithms (genetic, etc) to generate levels at dev time

Example: interactive terrain generation

Part 3: Generative whole games

Genie paper from Google

Platformer game dataset, 7 million samples

Predicting future video frames (computer vision)

Enough similarities between platformer games

Trying to make the research reproducible

Asking for scenarios in English text

Model can even emulate parallax

Are all games about to be fully algorithmically generated?

Game generation might enable more inventiveness

The game itself might just be generative AI

Example: infinite craft

Conclusion

Procedural generation

Generating entire games from scratch

Video of Genie
