Prose Writings of Bayard Taylor

1880. With notes by Marie Hansen-Taylor. American journalist and author, his romantic verse in Ximena and Other Poems secured him a long-standing assignment as correspondent for the New York Tribune. His trips to California, Mexico, Europe, Africa, and East Asia provided him with material for lectures, novels, and travel books. The best of his poetry is found in Poems of the Orient and in his verse drama Prince Deukalion (included in this volume). His most ambitious work was his metrical translation into English of Goethe's Faust, which earned him appointment as U.S. minister to Germany. Contents: The Prophet; The Masque of the Gods; Prince Deukalion; and Notes. See other titles by this author available from Kessinger Publishing.

Prose Writings of Bayard Taylor

Excerpt from The Poems of Bayard Taylor Ah, vain the question! 'tis enough to know My heart in song has blossomed and has bled Has learned with love of living bards to glow, And touched the garments of the laurelled dead. You, also, Friends, that wear the Artist's crown, Or, wearing not, the crown to others bring, You do not ask my measure of renown, But wait, content to hear, as I to sing. Your love upholds me in the silent days, And in the tuneful nights I give to Art; These leaves are yours, to whom their speech betrays The changeful fancy and the changeless heart. Excerpt from The Poems of Bayard Taylor To My Friends. Shall this an emblem be of that blue sky Wherein are set the golden stars of song? Drops the reluctant world its doubting cry, To give me room among the shining throng? Ah, vain the question! 'Tis enough to know My heart in song has blossomed and has bled: Has learned with love of living bards to glow, And touched the garments of the laurelled dead. You, also, Friends, that wear the Artist's crown, Or, wearing not, the crown to others bring, You do not ask my measure of renown, But wait, content to hear, as I to sing. Prose Writings of Bayard Taylor

Excerpt from A Sheaf of Poems In this volume the various minor translations of Bayard Taylor have been collected for the first time. To them have been added a number of poems of different authors, translated by Bayard Taylor's daughter. As the latter has followed the precepts of her father in reproducing the poems in their original meters, it seems fitting to intersperse her translations with those of her father, so as to arrange them all as a whole. Those translations which are the product of Mrs. Kiliani are designated by her initials: L. B. T. K. Some of the poems translated by Bayard Taylor have appeared in early editions of his Poems. A few have been published here and there during his life-time. Most of them, however, have been collected from his prose volumes, and principally from Studies in German Literature, and Critical Essays and Literary Notes, a volume issued after the author's death and now out of print.
