The lectures in this book are intended to exhibit, in a plain and straightforward manner, the principal Evidences of the Catholic Church. The hope is that some sincere and candid souls may be led back by the perusal of them to the bosom of the true Church, from which their fathers in an evil hour separated, to follow after the devices of their own hearts.

Lectures on the Evidences of Catholicity

The following Lectures, delivered in the Cathedral of Louisville, were intended to exhibit, in a plain and straightforward manner, the principal Evidences of the Catholic Church. To every lover of the Christian Religion it must be apparent, on sufficient examination, that the Evidences which sustain Catholicity are substantially identical with those which establish Christianity itself. The scope of these Lectures is to establish this identity. In point of fact, Catholicity and Christianity were the same thing during the first fifteen centuries of the Christian era; and to every one who will carefully and candidly examine the question in all its bearings, it must become manifest that this identity has continued down to our own day, and that it will continue to the end of time.

Lectures on the Evidences of Catholicity

IT may occur to some persons to feel surprise, that the Author of the following Lectures, instead of occupying himself on the direct proof of Catholicism, should have professed no more than to remove difficulties from the path of those who have already admitted the arguments in its favour. But, in the first place, he really does not think that there is any call just now for an Apology in behalf of the divine origin of the Catholic Church. She bears her unearthly character on her brow, as her enemies confess, by imputing her miracles to Beelzebub. There is an instinctive feeling of curiosity, interest, anxiety, and awe, mingled together in various proportions, according to the tempers and opinions of individuals, when she makes her appearance in any neighbourhood, rich or poor, in the person of her missionaries or her religious communities.
