Final Essay Topics . Choose a case study where it appears that the scientific process is being influenced by contextual values. Describe Assess the degree to which the scientific process maintains its integrity in the face of this interaction. • Provide an argument for or against Longino's integrity thesis. Explain your position with arguments and examples from scientific practice. Provide an

Can we be altruistic? . Are we programmed by genetics to behave the way we behave? • Is society essentially a fight for survival?

The Great Chain of Being by Didacus Valades from his 1579 Rhetorica Christiana

Elements of Darwin's Theory Common descent (proposed by Erasmus Darwin) Natural selection as the main driver of evolution and the explanation for why animals fit their environments

Evolution by natural selection if and only if: . there is variation in a population • that variation is heritable • heritable variations are linked to different rates of reproductive success

But some people almost immediately went from this as a description, to a normative claim: "nature is a big competition, survival is the only prize, and eating the weak is a good thing"

"Darwin's work is most important and suits my purpose in that it provides a basis in natural science for the historical class struggle." . - Marx; 16 January 1861

Alfred Russell Wallace: groups which cooperate are more efficient than groups with in-group competition therefore co-operation will spread and take over the world inheritance interferes with within-group selection, so should be abolished the subjugation of women interferes with sexual selection, so should also be abolished

Eugenics Francis Galton (Darwin's cousin) thought the theory entailed that we needed to intervene to make people fitter, because civilization let the un-fit survive and reproduce

By the mid 20th century, Galton's version was defining public policy: "by 1940 sterilisation laws had been passed by thirty American states, three Canadian provinces, a Swiss canton, Germany, Estonia, all of the Scandinavian and most of the Eastern European countries, Cuba, Turkey and Japan." (Paul, p.230)

Eugenics in Canada The Alberta Eugenics Board continued to sterilize people until they were dismantled in 1972 99% of cases that came before the board were approved for sterilization Thousands were sterilized without their consent, mostly young people, women, and aboriginals

Sociobiology . 1960s to 1970s was the heyday . Based on the idea that all animal societies may be subject to general laws of sociality

Sociobiologists attempted to use a mix of game theory and population genetics to explain selfless and selfish behaviour in animal societies
