

Bundle Hanser Community Corrections Pratt Addicted To Incarceration

#community corrections #incarceration addiction #criminal justice reform #alternatives to prison #Hanser Pratt analysis

This comprehensive bundle, featuring insights from Hanser and Pratt, critically examines the problematic 'addiction to incarceration' prevalent in our justice system. It delves into the urgent need for robust community corrections and systemic reforms, advocating for effective alternatives to prison to foster true rehabilitation and sustainable public safety.

PROFESSIONALS

PAROLE Probation and parole officers have been described as adopting different roles on the job.

ETHICAL Different ethical issues can be discussed in relation to each of these types.

TIME SERVER The passive time server may violate professional ethics in not performing duties associated with the role.

PAROLE OFFICERS We have been discussing probation and parole officers simultaneously earlier, but there are some important distinctions between the two.

HALFWAY The ethical issues concerning halfway houses are a combination of those that confront institutional corrections and those seen in community corrections.

CULTURE If such a shift is strong enough to permeate the culture of corrections, then we may see fundamental changes in the ethics and expectations for correctional officers and other correctional professionals.

PEACEMAKING Peacemaking corrections also offers an approach of care, or looking at what needs to be done with both the heart and the head.

Restorative justice programs would not be appropriate for all offenders; there will always be a need for incarceration facilities for the violent, recidivistic offenders who need to be incapacitated.
