| KLM by KLM Royal Dutch Airlines 756,696 views 8 years ago 4 minutes, 19 seconds - Captain Andrea van Dijk explains on a flight from Amsterdam to Athens how airplanes actually fly. Always wanted to know what ...
The engines produce a large amount of thrust, moving the airplane forward.
As the airplane's speed increases, air moves faster over and under the wings.
The curvature of the wings forces air to move faster over the top...
During acceleration, pilots check this screen for the exact speed to lift off at the right time.
Control surfaces are used to turn the airplane towards Athens.
Ailerons change the airstream along the wings, changing the lift of each wing.
Approaching Athens, the airplane needs to slow down to its landing speed.
Approaching the runway, pilots fly an exact speed based on weight, flap settings and wind speeds.
Thrust reversers diverting the engine thrust
