An elusive blending of tones now seemed pulsing with life; surely even a flickering flame of vitality would be blown into warm livingness in such a place. Even the chart case in the wall glittered with the same clean, brilliant hues from its glass and metal door. The usual revolving paper disks showed white beyond the glass. Tales of the Undead - Suffer Eternal Anthology: Volume III

Once upon a time there was a city by the sea. The city was called Formidia. Beneath this city there existed an underground society, dark and sinister. An entire city beneath the streets of Formidia, deep within the earth, whose dark inhabitants only rose to the surface to take unsuspecting Formidians back down below; forever. The tales of this underground city called Trinova were only fables and legends; dark fairytales told to children late at night in their beds. The stories weren't real.... Artist Jack Court is famous in Formidia for his paintings and depictions of the fables of Trinova. But Jack harbors a dark secret of those tales, one that he keeps hidden within the paint of his canvases. Then one day, Jack meets Terra, a beautiful young woman who wants to know about Jack's most prized and mysterious painting. Terra wants to know the story behind the paint. Why is Jack so drawn to Terra? What is it about her that keeps him so endlessly enthralled and entranced? And why does she care so much about his art? Jack will soon receive the answers to all his questions and more, as he gets to know Terra better. But some stories are better left untold. Falling in love might just be the end of life as Jack knows it.
