#U.S. Office of Personnel Management #OPM 9/11 responsibility #American bureaucracy 9/11 #federal government 9/11 #government agency accountability 9/11

Delve into the provocative question: Was the U.S. Office of Personnel Management responsible for the events of 9/11? This piece critically examines the role and scope of the American bureaucracy, clarifying the functions of federal government agencies and addressing popular misconceptions regarding their involvement in national tragedies, providing a clear perspective on OPM's actual responsibilities versus widely circulated theories.

Bureaucratic Power and Political Accountability - Bureaucratic Power and Political Accountability by GreggU 1,106 views 3 years ago 4 minutes, 45 seconds - The political accountability of a bureaucracy, is enforced through multiple channels, both legislative and executive. Political ...

INTERESTS Political interests in the legislature and in the executive branch are frequently at odds with one another, making it difficult to enforce accountability consistently or effectively.

PERSONNEL The difficulty is further compounded by the hybrid systems of personnel management found in different parts of the executive hierarchy in the national government and in many states and localities.

EXECUTIVES Another factor limiting accountability is the inability of top executives to command wholehearted responses from administrative subordinates.

ACCOUNTABILITY Bureaucratic accountability is the principles of political accountability applied in an effort to control bureaucratic power.

RIGHTS Some other mechanisms of accountability also exist. Bureaucracies are legally accountable to the courts for their observance of individual rights and liberties, whether in their investigative capacities or routine administrative activities.
