When considering the mode, there is a communication continuum: . An individual who has a communication system and is using that system to achieve his/her optimum communication potential.
An individual, who has a communication system but is currently unable to use that system to its full potential.

The use of augmentative and alternative communication (AAC) does not stifle verbal communication, but in many cases can actually assist its development.

Feature Analysis • Each team member is to review independently - Identify top student characteristics/priorities - Identify appropriate systems Discuss as a team and identify the potential systems that address characteristics/priorities identified
