What Strikes Me in the Us-China Negotiation

And You Could Have the Best Product but There's a Lot of Competition from Companies All around the World and Then if You're Disadvantaged with Respect To Trade Agreements You Know It's Hard To Stay in that Market at You Know and Maintain Your Market Share and You Know What I Have Heard and Particularly from Farmers but Not Limited to Agriculture It's once You Lose that Market Share You Don't Gain It Back Overnight It Takes Time It Took Your Time To Build that Market Share and once Other Suppliers Are Found or Other Sources Are Found It's Hard and It Takes Time To Kind Of Rebuild Your Presence in any Market and Our Farmers Have Seen that and that's Why You Hear Them You Know Complain

We Just Need To Wait this Out How Can We Do a Deal with this President When We Think We're Close to a Deal or We Think We Had a Constructive Round of Talks the Response Is To Put More Tariffs on and So We've Seen What the President's Done with Mexico and Other Countries Maybe We're Just Better Off Waiting You Know Waiting this Out I Think Others Would Say No We Don't Know You Know Who the Next President Will Be and Trump I Think Made It Clear Yesterday that if He if He Succeeds in Winning another Term He's Going To Be Even Tougher on China so They Better Come Forward

This Is at the Expense of Other Work They Could Be Doing like Innovating Their Products and R & Di Know It's Not the Same People and the Companies That Do all of this but I Think We all Need To Recognize that There Is a Trade-Off When Your Supply Chains Are Really in Jeopardy or At Least under Attack and I Think that's Something You Know We Need To Keep in Mind I Did Want To Just Say One Thing before I Leave When I Heard this Morning that this Was Going this this Round in October Was Going To Be the 13th Round of the Trade
