The 13th District

Split into three sections: Book I is entitled "Of the People" and tells the story of a young man's campaign for Congress ("on the stump"). Book II, entitled "By the People," has him up for re-election and facing a fight for the nomination ("in convention assembled"). Book III is, as you've no doubt guessed, "For the People" has him fighting for and losing his third term ("the final returns"). The engagement and marriage of the congressman is a subplot that is often times written in a slightly overwrought form, and yet juxtaposed with the cynicism of the political parts, it works somehow. The lead female character, the congressman's fiancée/wife, comes across in typical 19th-century "woman as angel" or moral compass and yet, knowing that the author in his subsequent job as Mayor of Toledo, Ohio appointed a great number of women to various political posts, one cannot be too hasty in writing her off as the same old, same old. Despite all the trials the congressman goes through, he seems to learn nothing. He merely becomes more and more crooked as power slips further and further away from him. In contrast, his wife, having suffered the loss of her father, the "cooling off" of love within the marriage and having to live with the shame of her husband's deeds, comes to decide at the end that her life is meant to be in the service of others (including her selfish husband!).

Excerpt from The 13th District: A Story of a Candidate Just as the train with a salute of the engine's whistle careened into full view of the smoke-blackened shed that is know in Grand Prairie as the depot, the sound of cheering came to Garwood's ears. He was longing in the smoking car, his long legs stretched to the seat before him, his face begrimed with soot and glistening with perspiration, his whole body heavy with fatigue. But the cheers, coming to him in a vast crescendo that even the noise of the car-wheels as they hammered the Wabash crossing could not drown, brought back to his eyes the excitement that had been burning in them for days; a smile soothed his tired visage, and instinctively he flexed in every fiber. Killing and Dying is a stunning showcase of the possibilities of the graphic novel medium and a wry exploration of loss, creative ambition, identity, and family dynamics. With this work, Adrian Tomine (Shortcomings, Scenes from an Impending Marriage) reaffirms his place not only as one of the most significant creators of contemporary comics but as one of the great voices of modern American literature. His gift for capturing emotion and intellect resonates here: the weight of love and its absence, the pride and disappointment of family, the anxiety and hopefulness of being alive in the twenty-first century. "Amber Sweet" shows the disastrous impact of mistaken identity in a hyper-connected world; "A Brief History of the Art Form Known as Hortisculpture" details the invention and destruction of a vital new art form in short comic strips; "Translated, from the Japanese" is a lush, full-color display of storytelling through still images; the title story, "Killing and Dying"

The 13th District; A Story of a Candidate

Adrian Tomine's cult comix series Optic Nerve is finally collected into one sharp-looking hardcover graphic novel. Described as the Raymond Carver of comix, Tomine constructs tales of emotional disconnection with an ear for painfully real dialogue. Combined with his deft black and white depictions of urbane lifestyles, Tomine's fans have often accused him of eavesdropping in on their most intimate moments and, with forensic skill, laying their lives bare. The conflicts between emotional gratification, narcissistic neediness and moral discernment mark the title story - "Summer Blonde" - in which a socially crippled man nurses an obsessive crush on a young woman. He watches close up, paralyzed by his guilt, as her beauty catches the eye of his neighbor: a hip, selfish young man with a short attention span. One of Optic Nerve's most popular stories, "Hawaiian Getaway," features Hilary, telephone service rep who is having the worst week of her life. She lost her job, her apartment, and her grandmother. Close to the edge, she is losing her grip. Reaching out to random strangers on the phone, Hilary is looking for someone to help her. In "Alter Ego" a successful young author has writer's block. He can't, or won't, decide between another ghostwriting gig and finishing his second 'real' novel. He stalls on committing to his novel and his girlfriend when a chance postcard leads him to flirt with fantasies of changing the past. Finally, "Bomb Scare" documents the early unease of his generation by setting this coming-of-age story during the tense months of the Gulf War, the event that ushered in the 1990s.

Excerpt from The Clarion, Vol. 5: Twenty-Ninth Annual Catalog, Clarion State Normal School, Clarion, Pennsylvania, 13th District Clarion, Forest, Jefferson, McKean and Warren Counties, Catalog 1915-1916, Prospectus 1916-1917 By an act of the Pennsylvania State Legislature, passed in the year 1886, the counties of Clarion, Forest, Jefferson, mckean, and Warren were separated from the Eighth Normal School District and were constituted as the Thirteenth District. The necessary steps were at once taken to organize a Normal School. Contributions and pledges of money, amounting to forty thousand dollars, were Obtained for the purpose Of se curing a suitable Site and erecting the necessary buildings. This amount was supplemented by a legislative appropriation of twenty - five thousand dollars. The grounds and buildings which had belonged to Carrier Seminary were purchased from the Erie Conference Of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Additional land adjoining the original purchase was Obtained from the Arnold estate, and in the fall Of 1886, work was begun on the erection of two commodious dormitories. These buildings were completed before the middle of February. A committee repre senting the State Officially approved the provisions thus made for carrying on the work of a Normal School, and the insti tution was formally opened on the twelfth day of April, 1887. The school continued under the joint control of the State and the stockholders until February 9, 1916, when the State pur chased all of the outstanding stock and formally took over the property in the name of the Commonwealth. The enrollment during the first term was 140. The enroll ment for the year 1887 - 1888, the first full year of the ex istence of the school, was 364. The first graduating class num bered ten young men and two young women. Twenty-three and one-fourth acres of ground containing seven commodious build ings now constitute the Normal School plant. The graduates number 1775. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books. Themes: Hi-Lo, Sports, urban teens, Basketball. Finding the "right book" for struggling learners is essential to build both confidence and proficiency. Reading supports must be seamless, so that struggling readers are not stigmatized. The District 13 series does just that--written using carefully chosen vocabulary and simple sentences, the novels offer compelling teen stories about characters that interest young adult readers. Using sports as a backdrop, these edgy and mature titles confront issues that are of great importance to urban teens, especially teenaged boys: Coming of age, dating, fitting in, friendships, drugs, self-esteem, and school. Straightforward plots move readers through the 48-pages of text quickly and efficiently with satisfying resolutions. Synopsis: They all walked to the court. Uncle Robert passed the ball to Patrice. She stepped toward the baseline. She looked so natural. She shot the ball. Nothing but net. Akil's jaw dropped. "Can you do that again?" The answer was yes.
