Introduction by Arnault Morisson to the topic

Presentation by Arno Meerman, CEO of the University Industry Innovation Network, the Netherlands.

Q&A: You mentioned that 1% of universities produce 70% of the license income. Should regional universities, that are not elite universities, prioritise entrepreneurship rather than licensing or patenting?

Q&A: Many people are looking at ways to create more value for their regional ecosystems and we see a mismatch between the research excellence and the business ecosystem. Do we invest in our businesses or do we change our research? How can we close the gap?

Presentation by Sébastien Hug from the Head Innovation Office at the University of Bern, Switzerland.

Q&A: Cities and regions are launching challenges and asking young entrepreneurs and startups to help solve them. Do you organise something similar with this challenge-oriented approach?

Latest insights from Interreg Europe good practices by Triinu Lööve on the University of Tartu spin-off program, Estonia (IMPROVE).

Q&A: Given the target set for you, what do you do with the rest of the startup community? Do you have a prioritisation scheme?

Q&A: Are the skills necessary or do you have to offer them training?

Initiatives from the Interreg Europe project VIADUCT by Cristina Ruiz and Camille Bertrand from the University of Zaragoza, Spain.

Q&A: You all mentioned the importance of accelerating or developing the entrepreneurship culture. Do you have good examples where entrepreneurship training is done at an early stage?

Q&A: If there is one KPI you would give yourself to demonstrate research valorisation, what would it be?
