WRITING a. Cuneiform script is one of the earliest schemes of writing, identified by its wedge-shaped marks on clay tablets, built by means of a blunt reed for a stylus. This was in use for more than three millennia, through several points of development (34th century BCE - 2nd century CE).

b. EGYPTIAN HIEROGLYPHS - an orderly writing system used by the ancient Egyptians that combined anagrammed and alphabetic elements. Egyptians used cursive hieroglyphs for religious articles on papyrus and wood.

a. PHOENICIAN ALPHABET - called by tradition the Proto-Canaanite alphabet for epitaphs older than around 1050 BCE, is the oldest confirmed alphabet. It contains 22 letters, of all which are consonants. It was acquired from Egyptian hieroglyphs and became one of the most extensively used writing systems, spread by Phoenician merchants across the Mediterranean world.

b. GREEK ALPHABET - was derived from the Phoenician alphabet. Then, the Greeks acclimated it to their own language, creating in the development the first "true" alphabet, in which vowels bestowed balanced status with consonants.

Is the clear-cut mode of narrative, commonly fictional, served in performance. • Western drama comes from classical Greece. The theatrical culture of the city-state of Athens generated three genres: tragedy, comedy and the satyr play.

Papyrus is a chunky, paper-like matter produced from the core of the Cyperus papyrus plant which was used in ancient Egypt and Mediterranean cultures for writing century CE by Cai Lun. Mayans used a similar bark-paper writing material not later than 5th century CE, called

The first papermaking process was documented in China during the Han period (25-220 CE). Cai Lun introduced the process of paper making which eventually spread out to some parts of the world. PRINTING PRESS - is an apparatus for administering pressure to an inked surface recessing upon a print medium (such as paper or cloth), thereby transferring the ink. The invention and spread of the printing press was one of the most prominent events in the second millennium.

The printing press was invented in the Holy Roman Empire by the German Johannes Gutenberg around 1440. He developed an entire printing system, which fulfilled the printing operation through all its stages.

DRY PLATES - work of Désiré van Monckhoven, the Collodion dry plates had been accessible since 1855. But it was not until the contraption of the gelatin dry plate in 1871 by Richard Leach Maddox that the wet plate process could be a match in quality and speed.

Telegraphy - is the long-distance broadcast of textual or symbolic messages. It is without the corporeal exchange of an object bearing the message. It necessitates that the technique used for encoding the message both be known sender and receiver.

Telephone or phone - is a telecommunications device that allows many users to administer a conversation when they are too far apart to be heard.

In 1877, Phonograph - a device designed for the power-driven recording and reproduction of sound - was invented. In its later forms it was also called gramophone.

FILM - also called movie, motion picture, theatrical film or photoplay, is a series of immobile images, that when shown on a screen, generates the illusion of moving images.

1. RADIO - technology of using radio wave to convey information such as sound, by modulating some property of electro-magnetic energy waves transferred through space.

Television - telecommunication medium used for transmitting sound with moving pictures.

Computer - an electronic device for storing and processing data, typically in binary form, according to instructions given to it in a variable program.

3. Internet - is the global system of interconnected computer networks that uses the Internet protocol suite to communicate between networks and devices.
