Students will explain the processes of energy transformation as they relate to cellular metabolism. Describe both molecular and energetic input and output for cellular respiration and photosynthesis Model or map the cellular organization of metabolic processes Model or map the consequences of aerobic and anaerobic conditions to cellular respiration

Living cells require energy from outside sources to do work • The work of the cell includes assembling polymers, membrane transport, moving, and reproducing • Animals can obtain energy to do this work by feeding on other animals or photosynthetic organisms

Living cells require energy from outside sources to do work The work of the cell includes assembling polymers, membrane transport, moving, and reproducing Animals can obtain energy to do this work by feeding on other animals or photosynthetic organisms

Catabolic pathways release stored energy by breaking down complex molecules Electron transfer plays a major role in these pathways . These processes are central to cellular respiration - The breakdown of organic molecules is exergonic

Catabolic pathways release stored energy by breaking down complex molecules Electron transfer plays a major role in these pathways . These processes are central to cellular respiration . The breakdown of organic molecules is exergonic

Aerobic respiration consumes organic molecules and O₂, and yields ATP - Fermentation (anaerobic) is a partial degradation of sugars that occurs without O₂. Anaerobic respiration is similar to aerobic respiration but consumes compounds other than O₂. Cellular respiration includes both aerobic and anaerobic respiration but is often used to refer to aerobic respiration

Redox Reactions: Oxidation and Reduction In oxidation, a substance loses electrons, or is oxidized In reduction, a substance gains electrons, or is reduced the amount of positive charge is reduced . The transfer of electrons during chemical reactions releases energy stored in organic molecules . This released energy is ultimately used to synthesize ATP . Chemical reactions that transfer electrons between reactants are called oxidation-reduction reactions, or redox reactions

Oxidation of Organic Fuel Molecules During Cellular Respiration During cellular respiration, the fuel (such as glucose) is oxidized, and O₂ is reduced • Organic molecules with an abundance of hydrogen are excellent sources of high-energy electrons Energy is released as the electrons associated with hydrogen ions are transferred to oxygen, a lower energy state

Stepwise Energy Harvest via NAD and the Electron Transport Chain - In cellular respiration, glucose and other organic molecules are broken down in a series of steps Electrons from organic compounds are usually first transferred to NAD, a coenzyme • As an electron acceptor, NAD-functions as an oxidizing agent during cellular respiration Each NADH (the reduced form of NAD) represents stored energy that is tapped to synthesize ATP

NADH passes the electrons to the electron transport chain . Unlike an uncontrolled reaction, the electron transport chain passes electrons in a series of steps instead of one explosive reaction . It pulls electrons down the chain in an energy-yielding tumble • The energy yielded is used to regenerate ATP

Chapter 40 Basic Principles of Animal Form and Function - Chapter 40 Basic Principles of Animal Form and Function by Ms. Barker's Chemistry & Biology Channel 12,118 views 3 years ago 34 minutes organization • Anatomy is the study of the biological form of an organism • Physiology is the study of the biological functions an organism performs • The comparative study of animals reveals that form and

Materials such as nutrients, waste products, and gases must be exchanged across the cell membranes of animal cells • Rate of exchange is proportional to a cell's surface area while amount of exchange material is proportional to a cell's volume

Epithelial Tissue . Epithelial tissue covers the outside of the body and lines the organs and cavities within the body . It contains cells that are closely joined • The shape of epithelial cells may be cuboidal (like dice). columnar (like bricks on end), or squamous like floor tiles • The arrangement of epithelial cells may be simple (single cell layer), stratified (multiple tiers of cells), or pseudostratified a single layer of cells of varying length

Types of Connective Tissue . In vertebrates, the fibers and foundation combine to form six major types of connective tissue: - Loose connective tissue binds epithelia to underlying

Muscle tissue consists of long cells called muscle fibers, which contract in response to nerve signals • It is divided in the vertebrate body into three types: - Skeletal muscle, or striated muscle, is responsible for voluntary movement - Smooth muscle is responsible for involuntary body activities

The dynamic equilibrium of homeostasis is maintained by negative feedback, which helps to return a variable to a normal range . Most homeostatic control systems function by negative feedback, where buildup of the end product shuts the system off • Positive feedback amplifies a stimulus and does not usually contribute to homeostasis in animals

Set points and normal ranges can change with age or show cyclic variation . In animals and plants, a circadian rhythm governs physiological changes that occur roughly every 24 hours • Homeostasis can adjust to changes in external environment, a process called acclimatization

Concept 40.3: Homeostatic processes for thermoregulation involve form, function, and behavior •

Thermoregulation is the process by which animals maintain an internal temperature within a tolerable range • Endothermic animals generate heat by metabolism

Variation in Body Temperature • The body temperature of a poikilotherm varies with its environment • The body temperature of a homeotherm is relatively constant environment Bioenergetics is the overall flow and transformation of energy in an animal . It determines how much food an animal needs and it relates to an animals size activity, and environment

Metabolic rates are affected by many factors besides whether an animal is an endotherm or ectotherm • Factor one size - Metabolic rate is proportional to body mass to the power of three quarters ($m^{3/4}$)

Smaller animals have higher metabolic rates per gram than

Energy Budgets • Different species use energy and materials in food in different ways, depending on their environment • Use of energy is partitioned to BMR (or SMR), activity, thermoregulation, growth, and reproduction

Torpor and Energy Conservation • Torpor is a physiological state in which activity is low and metabolism decreases • Torpor enables animals to save energy while avoiding difficult and dangerous conditions • Hibernation is long-term torpor that is an adaptation to winter cold and food scarcity • Summer torpor, called estivation, enables animals to
