Love, Loss, Life Laughter, and More

Love, loss, life, laughter and more is a small collection of stories on emotions each one of us has either experienced or seen in life. You could know or be Rami or Niti or Mahi or even the man who got duped. Every story has something for you which may be nostalgic or remind you of someone you care. How these stories end or what happens next is for you to decide. Life of any of them could end the way you envision it. Read it, live it, love it.

Good Grief

We see, hear, know and think about death almost every day of our lives. We see and hear it on TV, radio and movies. We read about it in newspapers, on the Internet and in non-fiction and fictional books. We know it with every personal change and loss we experience. And we think about it consciously or unconsciously when the reality of mortality hits home. Good Grief - Love, Loss & Laughter is a collection of commentaries, stories and true-life events from the highly acclaimed newspaper column Good Grief. These are not your run-of-the-mill Ms. Manners type advice letters, though some are surprising and humorous. Good Grief includes real people, diverse circumstances and practical solutions. You won't find a lot of theoretical, academic or know-it-all poppycock in this concise collection, nor will the reader be required to wade through a textbook of dogmatic cliches. This work makes it easy to access an area of interest and discover down to earth, tried and true exercises, suggestions and solutions for living with loss. Some of the life and death issues presented in these pages include expected or sudden loss; male and female reactions; funerals; personal choices; pet loss; loss of a child; suicide; intimacy after loss; and keeping those who have died present in our lives.

Love, Loss, and Laughter

More than 5.3 million Americans suffer from Alzheimer's, and nearly 11 million family members and friends serve as unpaid caregivers. Love, Loss, and Laughter challenges the typical perception of people with Alzheimer's as empty shells, lost to themselves and others.

Love, Loss and Little White Lies

SHORTLISTED FOR TWO IRISH BOOK AWARDS 2021 'Something they don't tell you about getting older is that you fall. Oh, you hear about it in passing, of course, "She had a fall, poor thing". Falling is not something you ever think about as a younger woman. You think about falling in love . . .' At 20 Londoner Ann Ingle fell madly in love with an Irish fellow she met on holiday in Cornwall. At the church to arrange their shotgun wedding she discovered that he hadn't even told her his real name. Sixty-odd years later Ann looks back on that first glorious fall and in a series of essays considers what she has learned from the life that followed - bringing eight children into the world, their father's years of mental illness and tragic death at 40, being a cash-strapped single mother in 1980s Dublin, coming into her own in her middle years - going to college, working and writing, and continuing to evolve and learn into her ninth decade, even as she accepts the realities of being 'old'. Candid about everything that matters - love, sex, heartbreak, money, class, religion, mental health, rearing children (and letting them go), reading and writing, ageing - Openhearted is a compelling story about living life in a spirit of curiosity and delight and with a willingness to look for good in others. _____ 'By some distance the most courageous, most poignant, most life-affirming memoir I've read in the last twenty years and more' Paul Howard 'Genuinely inspirational. I LOVE ANN INGLE' Marian Keyes 'What a beautiful openhearted, at times broken-hearted memoir ... honest, funny, searingly direct, a wonderful voice ... remarkable' Joe Duffy 'Really beautiful. Searingly honest, astonishingly frank and very, very funny' Maia Dunphy

Openhearted

Artist Hunter Franks has been collecting stories of people's first loves from around the United States since 2014. This collection of stories will make you laugh, cry, and connect with your love for yourself and those around you.

First Love Project

Set in Portnabawd, an Irish town suffering in the dismal 1950s and 60s, When We Were Lovers All is about people in all their maddening complexity. The stories capture the zeitgeist of mid-twentieth century Ireland and illustrate the capacity of the human spirit to transcend the most repressive of environments. They show that love, laughter, sorrow and joy can bubble underneath the permafrost of clericalism and official conservatism. The police and clergy conspire to rid the town of Nelly, the local prostitute, but they reckon without her neighbours, who have their own way of defending their street. An ambitious poor boy making his way in Dublin falls for a rich girl, but will small town snobbery kill their love? A burly blacksmith brings home a wife to live in a house that he shares with his gay brother. A widow and a married man breach the community's moral boundaries and incur the wrath of the Church. A pretty English girl drifts into Portnabawd and falls for Seamus, a shy, lumbering farmer, but will she drift out as easily as she drifted in? Not even the Irish Sea can stop rock n' roll ... and the trouble it brings to the town. Sean O'Ree, American gangster, comes home to complete some unfinished business left over from the Irish Civil War. Two schoolboy victims of sadism and paedophilia become abusers themselves. Rural electrification is going to light up every corner of Molly Akins' candle-lit house, but shadows have their uses; they hide secrets that should remain hidden. Winnie, carrying a light purse, brings her children on an August Bank Holiday train excursion to the seaside and tries heroically to make her money last. Babby, a mentally ill man, and Tim, a youth suffering from dwarfism, become friends ... until prejudice raises its ugly head.

A Life in Stitches

On Dee Branch's first date with Johnnie Oliver, a fourth-generation funeral director, she knew she was in for a unique relationship when he had to leave "for just a minute"—and he came back to the car with a corpse. Over twenty years later, Dee was still in love with her charming southern gentleman when he passed away suddenly in 2007. Determined to carry on Johnnie's work, Dee earned her mortuary science degree, only to find herself no longer needed in the family business. So Dee crossed the racial divide in the most segregated industry in America and joined the staff of an African-American funeral home as a single white woman. In The Undertaker's Wife, Oliver draws from her wealth of experience to provide candid and often hysterically funny advice on dying well and surviving the loss of those who have gone before. Her insights on the common ground of grief, survival, and the ever-present faithfulness of God (to all of us, regardless of our race, religious upbringing, or socio-economic background) will help readers prepare for one of life's only certainties—and do it with wisdom, grace, and a healthy dose of joy.

The Undertaker's Wife

The Changing Room is a contemporary novel which uses a delightful combination of humour and pathos to tell the story of Sandy, a stressed-out mum and carer, who needs to change her life. Readers, especially mature women, will empathize with the heroine's real-life dilemmas.

The Changing Room

This book of poetry started with no thought process at all. A few poems written over many years. Mostly with very personal messages to family and friends. Poems to my husband, my grandchildren, my friends. Then, for unknown reasons I started writing about life. My life, the lives of people I know and simply life in the world in which I live. Many of these poems lean close to my heart, thus the title. They certainly do reflect my personal thoughts on life, love, loss and laughter. Asterisked titles are titles given to me over time by my BFF who challenged me to write the poem. You might say she spurred me on! The world I grew up in and the world my grandchildren are growing up in are so significantly different it's sometimes hard to even imagine. My poems reflect the changes both good and bad as perceived by the writer. Some strike on my past, some on the sadness of today's world and some simply on the joy I see in life. I hope you find comfort, humour, and a wee bit of quietude in some of the poems and that you see the beauty of life both in the human factor and the world we've been given to care for.

The Wisdom of Women

How does infertility and loss impact daily life? Are patients adequately supported by an industry that promises so much? How are sufferers viewed by those who've little experience of this issue? Are they robustly supported by family, friends, and employers? And how can laughter, love, self-care, and balance be consistent companions during such emotional wrangling? Long-term infertility causes a mindboggling array of hidden issues, from workplace discrimination to financial instability, from marital difficulties to serious mental health concerns. Yet, in an age of deconstructing social taboos with access to almost limitless information, there remains a significant lack of understanding of these harmful repercussions. Offering powerful insight into the struggles of sufferers, and raising awareness to spark enlightening conversations leading to greater support is at the heart of Everyone Else But Me. Ultimately a story of love, resilience and survival through infertility, the stories and experiences of other remarkable women are also woven into this sometimes harrowing, yet uplifting scrutiny. Each thought-provoking chapter's core message explores a different theme, ending with a carefully crafted poem audibly brought to life via a QR code. Whilst, at first glance, there's little to laugh about in this whirl of heartache and loss, a sprinkle of dark humour can help us through even the most testing times. This is what is hoped the poems inspire; comfort, reassurance, the release of a bottled-up tear, and laughter. For 10 years, infertility was an interloper in my own marriage, eroding my self-esteem, bank balance and happiness. I joined online support groups and forums, read a library's worth of books, blogs and helpful articles, nevertheless, few places offered sanctuary from the perpetual feed of pregnancy, and proud new parents. Accosted by our child-centric society, I felt like I was the only one scrabbling to keep all my marbles in place. I'm certain that readers struggling themselves will be emotionally drawn to, connect with, and uplifted by many elements of this story and poems. This is the book; the story, the poems, the research, the facts, the advice, the care and the humour that I would have appreciated reading when at the peak of my own psychological tussle with this shadowy and elusive nemesis. I believe this book will be an excellent resource for the increasing number of men and women facing these challenges who wish to rise up from the adversity of grief to feel more empowered and less alone. Everyone else but me: Life, Love, Loss & Laughter through Infertility shines light into infertility's murky, misunderstood corners in a way that supports the self-care and well-being of infertility sufferers, educates the uninformed, and entertains those who need a pick me up. And for those who keep going, year after year, for those who need encouragement to go forth with wisdom, strength and renewed optimism, this book is for you. "It's important to tell it as it was and now is. Now, I give myself permission to acknowledge and respect how I felt. That is the way it was. And now I am a new version of me. Like a phoenix from the flames. Stronger, wiser, a little haggard perhaps, and sometimes still sad, but no longer so sad, ashamed or anxious." "A tale of knock-backs, resilience and oh so many laughs. Even in the darkest moments of her fertility journey, Lorna emerges in glorious technicolour with a message of hope for others. And her poetry is golden!" ~ Emma Burgess, Editor

Tapestry

Losing her husband Dennis unexpectedly in 2011, at the young age of 47, Debra was faced with handling grief in the only way she knew how, with strength, grace and much laughter. Debra worked through her tears by posting to her husband each day (for one year) on a social media website after his passing. She credits her "seeing the light of day" by sharing funny stories of their time together and walking through the pain, not alone, but with her ever growing unshakeable faith in God and the resounding love of many who have taken this journey each day with her. Through her stories, her daily blog (thehappywidow.com) and her posts she has used her distinctively unique humor, desire to honor the love of her life, and her ability to "tell it like it is" to inspire, lift, and encourage others in a way seldom seen. "Losing the one you love suddenly is like being put on a roller coaster ride (and I have always hated those). You rise slowly, fall fast, hold on for dear life, and scream not so nice words that you hope those around you didn't hear. But when you get off this ride, while you may not want to buy another ticket, you are so proud of yourself for just being able to say you let go, threw your hands in the air the entire time and you indeed lived through it." You will laugh, you will cry, at time you will pray you never personally know how she truly feels, but after you read this book that was written to her sweet husband Dennis and for her children Timothy and Sarah, you will believe that just maybe there is a way to face death and come out smiling.

Nexus in love laughter, loss and life

'This book is a novel in the form of variations. The various parts follow each other like the various stages of a voyage leading into the interior of a theme, the interior of a thought, the interior of a single, unique situation the understanding of which recedes from my sight into the distance. It is a book about laughter and about forgetting, about forgetting and about Prague, about Prague and about the angels.' The Book of Laughter and Forgetting is the most secret of Kundera's novels. This new translation is the first to be fully authorized by Milan Kundera.

My Husband Has Died, But That's Not the Funny Part

How do you respond to the deteriorating health of a loved one? How do you move forward towards their impending death? Honest, deeply personal and thought-provoking, Who Stole Grandma? is written not as a handbook on End of Life, but as a life affirming call on each of us to relish the time that remains. At the start of 2007, Mark Lanyon's sister declared that she could no longer care for their ailing mother, Moosh. So began the most challenging and the most enriching period in Mark's life, as he strove to support a mother who was losing her strength, her independence and her treasured role as hands-on grandmother. Interwoven with the pain, there was time for Mark and Moosh to forge an even stronger relationship and to find the funny in the face of adversity. Mark shares key moments in Moosh's final years; the trials, tribulations and mini-triumphs; the expected heartbreak and unanticipated hilarity; and, most importantly, the love. If you have ever worried about losing a loved one, this heart-warming book is for you. "I have laughed out loud and cried in equal measure." Hillary "Utterly lovely." Jane "This book tore at my heart strings." Bev "Stunning craftsmanship with words -- captivated every part of me." Sarah "A great journey: so much love, sadness, laughter, and caring." Davinder "Just perfect." Libby

The Book of Laughter and Forgetting

In these 20 heartfelt essays, Rachael Herron celebrated romance novelist by day, 911 dispatcher by night, and founder of the hugely popular blog Yarnagogo.com shows how when life unravels there's always a way to knit it back together again, many times into something even better. Honest, funny, and full of warmth, Herron's tales, each inspired by something she knit or something knit for her, will speak to anyone who has ever picked up a pair of needles. From her very first sweater (a hilarious disaster, to say the least) to the yellow afghan that caused a breakup (and, ultimately, a breakthrough), every piece has a moving story behind it. This beautifully crafted and candid collection is perfect for the knitter who loves to read and the reader who loves to knit.

Love, Etc.

This book is a first offering of poetry by actor/teacher/artist, Jeff Warren. It is a compilation of some of the poems written across more than half a century. He writes with great personal passion and humor. His love and use of words enables him to capture his thoughts and feelings about love and love lost, apostasy to whimsy. Some are fanciful, others iconoclastic. You may even find a couple of erotic ones. Each poem expresses a moment, a thought or a dream in his life when he was so moved by love, tears, anger or laughter that he felt compelled to write a poem.

Behind the Laughter

This collection contains nine short stories (in comics format) by Canadian writer/artist Von Allan.

A Life in Stitches

I didn't know what I was writing when I started. It was just a way for me to get things off my chest, out of my head; losing John affected me in ways I hadn't considered. Writing 'Nine Years' helped me to realise, and appreciate, things I hadn't previously acknowledged as important, or relevant. I never planned on it becoming four parts, it just happened. There were moments when I had to stop writing so I could cry, laugh, think, breathe, let whatever revelation I had had, to sink in. We enjoyed lots of good times over our nine years together, too many to talk about. I have included some of my favourites. We had a good life with lots of laughter, it wasn't all doom and gloom. I wasn't sure if I would let people read what I was writing at the beginning; it is deeply personal. I've pretty much laid myself, and my life with John, bare for the world to pass judgement on. I haven't sugar coated anything, I have been blunt in some of my wording, that's just the way I am. This isn't about justifying my grief, I don't need to do that; I refuse to do that. Grief needs no justification. I would like to think that reading 'Nine Years' will provide an insight into the reality of losing someone you love. To anyone who reads 'Nine Years' who has suffered a loss then I hope you find some kind reassurance that you are not alone in the feelings, thoughts, emotions you have had, or are still experiencing. It is shit, life is very unfair, but we are still standing. I don't claim to be an expert, I don't have the answers, I do a story to share.
