Thunder and Lightning

'21st-century genius' Elle A howling wind, a thunderstorm, the beating sun – it's with the elements that nature shows its true force and wonder. In Thunder and Lightning, Guggenheim fellow and Pulitzer nominee Lauren Redniss draws a new account of the weather. She has travelled from the frozen archipelagos of the Arctic Ocean to the 'absolute desert' of Atacama, Chile, to show us the elements at their most extreme. Along the way, through interviews and research, she has unearthed curious stories of exploration, savagery and coincidence – stories which show us how weather has shaped humanity, intervened in the course of history, and how mankind, in turn, has tried to bend the weather to its ends. A book of exquisite beauty, with each illustration etched and coloured by hand, Thunder and Lightning informs, charms and transports. A combination of art and cultural history, from an uncategorisable and unique creative spirit, it will leave readers looking at the wind, the sun and the rain with new eyes.

Engaging characters." —Rocky Mountain News "Full of little gems of wit and intelligence." —Booklist "[A] fun-filled adventure. Heinlein would have written if he lived in George Bush's America." —Cory Doctorow, Boing Boing "A highly satisfying sequel to Red Thunder . . . Much more than a simple adventure story, full of poignant moments and relevant social commentary." —Kirkus Reviews, starred review "Drawing unabashedly on current events from 9/11 to Hurricane Katrina, the author mixes space opera—esque adventure and merriment with uncensored images of disaster areas and teenage sex. At his Heinlein-channeling best, Varley preaches the gospel of individual responsibility with all the fervor of a space-age libertarian revival preacher." —Publishers Weekly "John Varley blends past fiction, current events and future tech to create a story all his own, but with classic roots in at least a half dozen of Heinlein's juveniles." —SF Site

All about Lightning

ANGLICO: "Super Grunts" of 1st ANGLICO were deployed to all four tactical zones of Vietnam in small mobile fire control teams, providing support to U.S. Army and allied elements. This organization was the last tactical unit to stand down from the war and gained distinction as the only Marines in-country reporting directly to MACV. Working closely with Korean Marines, recounting several actions involving these legendary warriors from the Land of the Morning Calm, this little known but highly effective unit had an impact on the war far greater than their small numbers. Field radio operators and naval gunfire spotters composed the tactical membership of this unit. Both professions were cross trained in each competence, and each in turn was further qualified as tactical air controllers. An airborne capable platoon was established, mandating many ANGLICOs attend jump school and undertake other specialty training in the event they are called on to enter combat by unconventional means. Not being able to predict who they may be called on to support, training was pushed to the level of the most elite forces in the free world. BLUE DRAGONS: Most men of the Blue Dragon Brigade came of age during a war that raged fierce on their own homeland little more than a decade earlier. During a short lived occupation by North Korea, the people of the south endured extremely harsh treatment by would be conquerors. Events of recent history still burned in their hearts and haunted their dreams. They were mostly all children at the time leaving scarcely a man untouched by personal tragedy that could only be forged in a crucible of terror. Many were orphaned and all shared a thirst to settle a score that only those who drink deep from the same cup of dread can truly understand.

Thunder and Lightning

This is the miracle filled love story. As outlandish as some of this is, it is true. I was told by Mayo Clinic that I had Turner Syndrome and could never have children. I finished high school at an Episcopal Girl's School in another state than where my parents lived. I then went to a girl's college in Saint Louis. I didn't think any man would want me. I tried to join the military but was turned down because of my ailment. I then tried to become a nun and was turned down for the same reason. I decided I was going to live out my life alone as an old maid. No, I didn't like other girls, I just had not and did not expect to ever find a husband. My parents did not approve of any boy they ever met. Then the first miracle happened when I was 26. We met during a thunderstorm. He was a young Air Force Captain. The first words out of his mouth were, "We both like thunderstorms, let's get married." I did not take him seriously, but he kept hanging around and I was attracted to him. I had girlfriends in the same apartment building that were single, the same age and prettier. Why was he pursuing me? I decided I might as well go along with him and see where it went. My parents liked him and pushed me to go after him. I agreed to marry him when it looked like the military might separate us. I could not stand to lose him after our year of dating. We had a series of miracles throughout our life. For the next 45 years I could not have been happier. Some of the things that happened during these years when we were married were beyond belief except they happened. Some are funny but special memories. Not intentionally, but in our first three days in Paris we got locked in the public park at night in front of the Louve and had to go over the fence at the steps of the Louvre in front of French teenage lovers that had congregated there. The next night the last guard at the Louvre was locking the door when we got there. The next night we were temporarily locked on the upper balcony outside the Notre Dame Cathedral by the gargoyles for the night but were rescued by a janitor that came up to empty a trash can. When we returned to the states we were told it was impossible to adopt a newborn, but three months later we adopted a three week old blue eyed American boy paying only the investigation and court fees. A few years later, the miracle was repeated when we adopted a blue eyed girl baby. It seemed like God was watching out for me. We could dare to try anything knowing God would make it work. We could go where we wanted like to Yellowstone National Park without reservations and get a prime campsite or Grand Canyon in the summer without reservations. God provided. Then after 45 years I had an allergic reaction to some flowers and insisted on going to the hospital. Big mistake. The doctors did not believe it was an allergy attack and did everything wrong until after two weeks I gave it up. When I took my last breath lightning came out of nowhere with the thunder shaking the hospital as the hospital emergency generator was destroyed. When I went to heaven I found ways to tell Al and my children that I was still with them. I sometimes appeared in dreams to pass on information from heaven. Sometimes, when they were awake I came to them as various birds acting in ways that they knew was me and not just common birds. When will a blue jay land on your picnic table and walk up to you? How about appearing as a cardinal at two different memorial services in two different states. At the end of this book, I will tell you what it is like to be in heaven and it is probably not what you think, but will make sense when you think about it.

Thunder and Lightning Storms

"Dray captures the genius and ingenuity of Franklin's scientific thinking and then does something even more fascinating: He shows how science shaped his diplomacy, politics, and Enlightenment philosophy." –Walter Isaacson, author of Benjamin Franklin: An American Life Today we think of Benjamin Franklin as a founder of American independence who also dabbled in science. But in Franklin's day, the era of Enlightenment, long before he was an eminent statesman, he was famous for his revolutionary scientific work. Pulitzer Prize finalist Philip Dray uses the evolution of Franklin's scientific curiosity and empirical thinking as a metaphor for America's struggle to establish its fundamental values. He recounts how Franklin unlocked one of the greatest natural mysteries of his day, the seemingly unknowable powers of lightning and electricity. Rich in historical detail and based on numerous primary sources, Stealing God's Thunder is a fascinating original look at one of our most beloved and complex founding fathers.
