I think I'm done using SPS/IPF (clean, unmodified versions of the games, not cracked or trained) disks as the games stops working too often. Just a few of the latest games stopped working properly (and more games before that... copy protection stuff?). Like, Last Ninja 3, the last boss wouldn't attack me and I couldn't attack him, the last boss' balls in Cool World couldn't be destroyed, and in this game when entering the door.it wouldn't load. Yes, I used proper settings and even 100% emulated floppy disk speed. Even tried replaying the levels and it still wouldn't work. So, I resorted to playing cracked versions instead, and tried to cheat my way to the same point where I got stuck, and continue from there, without cheats of course. This would of course cause the amount of lives, score, the weapon etc to change when the gameplay continues from the new version, so I've tried to used WinUAE's debugger tool to find the stuff in the memory and change it, but I don't always succeed. In LN3 I just skipped to the last level using a cheat code (or maybe it was a trainer), took hits from enemies till I had the same amount of health as I did when I got stuck, so the continuation would be seamless, but not really, as I couldn't find the score in memory, so that one changes, but I always mention these things in the description.

The game continued seamlessly and some new shit happened again. I defeated the boss/guardian at.and instead of saying "TAKE A KEY FOR COMING IN !" (lol on that grammar), it told me to FUCK OFF (that was my interpretation anyway) cuz the weapon I had SUCKED, so it sent me back to the level before this one to try and find a fucking crucifix. Here's a clip
